18. 밑줄 친 This[this]가 가리키는 것으로 가장 적절한 것은? [1점]

In the later part of the nineteenth century, this was not generally required for going abroad and few obstacles were presented to people who crossed the border. During World War I, however, European governments introduced this for security reasons to keep out spies and to control the emigration of citizens with useful skills. This remained in place after the war, and became one of the most important parts of the standard procedure. From that time on, governments learned that an official certification — one that identifies a traveler as a citizen and as a national with a right to protection while abroad and a right to return to the country — is a necessity. Nowadays, this is a must-have item for people who go to other countries.

- ① passport
- ② traveler's check
- ③ social security card
- ④ money exchange certificate
- ⑤ international driver's license

19. 밑줄 친 it[its]가 가리키는 대상이 나머지 넷과 다른 것은? [1점]

The outlook for wind energy looks extremely promising because ① it is becoming cheaper and more efficient with the help of new technology. By 2020, more than ten percent of the world's electricity could come from ② it. Developing countries, especially, could be provided with wind energy as a clean source of electricity. Thanks to ③ its environmental advantage, these countries could reduce their emissions of greenhouse gases. A one-megawatt wind turbine, 50 to 60 meters tall, produces ④ it to supply 300 homes with electricity. Every year, the turbine will save more than 2,000 tonnes of carbon dioxide and 8 tonnes of nitrogen oxide. It will generate enough energy to repay the cost used in ⑤ its construction within just four months.

20. 다음 글의 밑줄 친 부분 중, 어법상 틀린 것은?

Photography was once an overwhelmingly male hobby, but recently more and more women can be seen ① to carry digital single-lens reflex (SLR) cameras. More than just recording subjects, photographs can serve as vivid reminders of the moments ② that we experienced at a particular time. The beauty of a flower, a decisive moment in a sports game, the joyful expression of a child finishing a footrace — there are many ③ moving sights that we wish to commit to memory, and sometimes compact digital cameras and cell phone cameras are just not good enough to capture ④ themselves. The evolving world of digital SLR cameras, with their ability to catch the essence of the moment without the fuss of traditional cameras, ⑤ is attracting new fans, particularly women.

21. (A), (B), (C)의 각 네모 안에서 어법에 맞는 표현으로 가장 적절한 것은?

The rules of beach volleyball are the same as (A) that / those of any other form of volleyball, but playing on the sand tends to be a bit more different than playing on an indoor court. It is much more difficult to move quickly on sand than it is on most surfaces, so play is generally slower than in court volleyball. To train for beach volleyball, athletes must spend a lot of time (B) developing / developed their lower body strength so they can move quickly and accurately across the ground despite the friction and resistance of the sand. However, although powerful legs are an important part of successful beach volleyball, the ability to jump high and hard and land without injury (C) plays / playing a more substantial role in becoming a good beach volleyball player.

One type of animal that some people want to own is a horse, but the horse adoption process is quite different from that of cats or dogs in some respects. ① Since these pets are small enough to be kept anywhere it is easy to find a good home for them. ② A horse, on the other hand, is a large creature that requires lots of space to run around and play in. ③ This is an important factor that should be kept in mind when you are thinking about a horse adoption. ④ Also, the company of other horses will help settle your horse down if something occurs and your horse becomes excited. ⑤ The best way to have a healthy horse is to find a huge place where you can house your horse and where the horse will be in its natural habitat.

23. When it comes to working in Oman, in the Middle East, people outside the country should consider a few special things such as Islamic culture and lifestyle. According to some job experts, however, getting a job there is said to be as simple as in any other country. For several years to come, there will be some job sectors in Oman where the job demand will never go down, such as banking, manufacturing, etc. These continuously growing sectors will require not only experienced but also new workers at a very consistent pace. There are numerous jobs on the managerial, technological and professional level that show no sign of dwindling. This means that, for foreign workers, the labor market in Oman may always be _____ to them.

- ① competitive      ② temporary      ③ available
 ④ deteriorating      ⑤ experimental

24. What is your first response when evaluating any work of art? You may carefully examine how the painting is constructed, the technique used, and the “message” it is conveying. In the case of your own work, however, this is hard to do, because you have labored over a piece for some time. You may lose objectivity or feel like you’re getting “too close” to the work. When this happens, it’s a good idea to put your painting aside for a few days so you can view it with a “fresh eye.” You can also turn the work upside down. You’ll notice mistakes more quickly in an upside-down picture than in a right side-up painting. You’ll find these simple tricks are a help, because sometimes _____ can blind us to new insights.

- ① curiosity      ② stubbornness      ③ simplicity
 ④ ignorance      ⑤ familiarity

25. Sometimes, offering a refreshment, such as a cup of coffee or juice, during a negotiation is an excellent strategy for _____. According to some experiments that studied unconscious human behavior, where people place their cup immediately after they take a drink is a strong indicator of whether or not they are convinced by or open to what you are saying. Those who look hesitant, unsure or negative about what they are hearing will place their cup to the opposite side of their body to form a single arm barrier. When they are accepting of what they are hearing, on the other hand, they place the cup to the side of their body showing an open or accepting attitude. [3점]

- ① revealing that your offer is quite attractive
 ② gauging how the other person is receiving your offer
 ③ persuading your counterpart into doing what you said
 ④ breaking the silence that you and your partner will face
 ⑤ rebuilding the partnership destroyed at a previous negotiation

26. The physicist David Bohm, while researching the lives of Einstein, Heisenberg, and Bohr, noticed that their incredible breakthroughs took place by _____. He observed, for instance, that Einstein and his colleagues spent years corresponding and brainstorming with each other. During these interactions, they exchanged and dialogued ideas, which later became the foundations of modern physics. They felt free to propose whatever was on their minds. They exchanged ideas without trying to change the other's mind and without bitter argument. They always paid attention to each other's views and established an extraordinary professional fellowship.

- ① asking why, instead of asking how
- ② putting reflective thinking into action
- ③ developing the ability to think realistically
- ④ encouraging open and honest conversation
- ⑤ questioning the acceptance of popular thinking

27. William James said in his famous book The Principles of Psychology, "No harsher punishment could be devised than that one should remain absolutely unnoticed by all the members of the society he belongs to. If no one turned around when we entered the room, answered when we asked, or minded what we did, but if every person we met acted as if we were non-existent things, a kind of despair would soon well up in us." The attentions of others matter to us because we by ourselves are uncertain about our own value. As a result, we tend to allow the judgement of others to play a determining role in how we see ourselves. Our sense of identity is _____. If they praise us, we develop a positive image of ourselves, but if they criticize us, we may fall into feelings of self-doubt.

- ① shaped by our body characteristics
- ② changed during the passage of time
- ③ dependent on how others view us
- ④ tied up with our memory of childhood
- ⑤ formed by the responsibility placed upon us

28. (A), (B), (C)의 각 네모 안에서 문맥에 맞는 낱말로 가장 적절한 것은?

To succeed as a writer, you must respect the rules of grammar. If editors have (A) consistently / latently found grammatical errors in your writing, the flaw in your work is not minor. It is fatal. Good writing and good grammar are not synonymous, but they are usually found in the same place. The rules of grammar exist to help you write well, not to (B) disclose / disrupt your work, and you cannot write well without them. The rules of grammar organize the language just as the rules of arithmetic organize the world of numbers. Imagine how difficult math would be if three and three equaled six only once in a while. Grammar is a system of rules for speaking and writing a given language. It exists so that we can communicate well, and when you (C) allocate / violate portions of the system, you are destroying the stability of the whole.

29. 다음 글에서 'I'가 겪은 심경 변화로 가장 적절한 것은?

I had been working at the same company for several years and was used to people asking me computer questions. I always did my best to be helpful, and felt myself highly flattered to hear so many nice compliments from my colleagues. Then Kelly joined my department. I enjoyed Kelly's company and thought she was a good addition to our office staff. Before long, I noticed people started flocking to Kelly with their computer questions. It hit me. No one needs me anymore. I'm just another office staff member. Why is Kelly suddenly the expert? What makes her better than me? I can answer their questions better! It's not fair that Kelly gets more attention than I do.

30. 다음 깃발 구름의 그림에 대한 글의 내용 중, 밑줄 친 낱말의 쓰임이 적절하지 않은 것은?

Your kids are individuals, so unless you have an only-child, it is important to set aside one-on-one time with each kid. You could bring your history-loving child to a museum, and take the dancer-kid to a ballet. Spending time with each child will make them feel special, and it will build their confidence in themselves. _____ (A) _____, you should give the kids time with mom and dad separately. Sometimes it can be easier for a child to talk about certain things with mom that they wouldn't want to talk about with dad, and vice versa. _____ (B) _____, a girl usually wants to talk to mom about boys and clothes. A boy might want to talk to dad alone about dating and sports. If you only spend time as a family unit, then you will be missing out on special bonds that can only be formed with one-on-one time.

32. Life will always present us with difficult people; and unless you want to live in a Himalayan cave you will have to learn how to deal with these people. When people say unreasonable things, the natural instinct is to argue with them. However, this draws you into their weird perspective. In many circumstances, it may be appropriate to maintain silence and not respond to what they say and do. Also, you should know that awkward and unpleasant people are the least likely to be willing to change. Thus, don't take it upon yourself to change their behavior. Instead, change your attitude. Unpleasant people may deserve criticism, but, this will not help the situation. If you can offer goodwill even to them, you will make tremendous progress.

33. Our body is made up of cells. Usually cells grow, divide, and produce as many cells as needed to keep the body healthy. Sometimes this process can happen rapidly and the body produces more cells than needed. The mass of unneeded cells forms a tumor. Not all tumors are harmful to our health. Tumors can either be benign or malignant. Benign tumors are not cancerous. They can often be removed surgically. Once a benign tumor is removed, it does not return. They are rarely a threat to life. Malignant tumors, on the other hand, are cancerous. These cancerous cells can break away the surrounding tissue. These cells can invade other parts of the body, which causes cancer. * benign : 양성의

- ① process of cell division
- ② formation and sorts of tumors
- ③ new methods of finding tumors
- ④ ways to diagnose health problems
- ⑤ specific effects of tumors on the body

34. 다음 글이 시사하는 바로 가장 적절한 것은?

One day in the late 1860's, an Iowa farmer left his fields for an hour to watch the construction of the transcontinental railroad near his farm. He watched the track being laid. A few minutes later a steam locomotive came through. The farmer went back to his fields and thought, "That's what railroading is all about: tracks and train." What didn't the farmer see about the railroad's possibilities? He didn't see that he could get his products to market much more quickly, and that his products would have to compete against products from many more places. He didn't see that it would be possible to go across the country in less than a week, and that people's perspectives on distance and time would change. He saw the steel tracks and the locomotive, but he didn't really see what the future held.

35. 다음 표의 내용과 일치하지 않는 문장은? [3점]

The chart on the left shows the results of a survey about how many states Americans have lived in. ① Among all American adults, about six out of ten people have lived in only one state in the U.S. ② The remainder is split among those who have lived in two different states (15%), three states (12%), or four or more states (15%). ③ Women have moved around more than men, and are more likely to have lived in four states than in two. ④ Older Americans are more likely than younger ones to have lived in four or more states. ⑤ If we look at the combined impact of age and gender, a quarter of the men aged 50 and older say they have lived in four or more states.

36. Jane Austen에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

Remaining unwed and relying on her parents for most of her life, Jane Austen had six brothers, and one sister, Cassandra, who was also an exceptionally close friend. Cassandra was a helpful assistant to her sister Jane's ideas for her novels. The two would discuss the characters, their roles, their lives, and in turn would make them seem 'real' to them. Jane's only educational background came from a relative and a brief attendance at the Reading Ladies Boarding School. Throughout her various living situations, Jane continued to write novels. And, even though they were published anonymously at that time, some stated that her character sketches were brilliant, equivalent to those of any of Shakespeare's creations. Jane passed away at the early age of 41, but her novels remain an important part of any academic study program of English literature.

37. peccary에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

The peccary, an odd-looking, piglike mammal whose habitat ranges from the southwestern United States to Brazil, looks like a curious cross among half a dozen animals. Peccaries are social animals, and where there's one peccary, there are usually a few dozen more. Against a combined peccary assault few animals have a fighting chance. Their tusks can rip through flesh as if it were tissue paper. By rubbing the tusks together they can make a chattering noise that warns potential predators not to get too close. Peccaries eat small animals, although their preferred food consists of roots, grass, seeds, and fruit. They can be extremely aggressive if they feel threatened, but otherwise tend to ignore humans.

38. A lot of people don't delegate because they think they're the only person who can do a particular task. If that's you, you're probably deceiving yourself. First off, the task probably isn't as difficult as you think it is; it's just that no one would do it exactly the way you would. But in addition to that, if no one can do the tasks you do, it's because you're hoarding knowledge and making things needlessly complicated. Thus, blame yourself if you think no one can do a task as well as you. The solution isn't complicated, though: Share the knowledge and let someone else give the task a try. You don't need to be the only person doing it in order to feel important.

39. Biofuels have been portrayed as an ideal replacement for fossil fuels. However, the situation is more complicated than it appears. There are a wide variety of methods and raw materials available for making the fuels. While some of the resulting products can cut greenhouse gas emissions, this isn't necessarily the case when all factors are considered. Researchers in Switzerland have carried out environmental life-cycle assessments of biofuels for rain forest clearance and soil acidification as well as the fuel's greenhouse gas emissions. According to them, reductions in greenhouse gas emissions can be obtained with many biofuels. However, most of the production paths display more negative impacts than gasoline in various other environmental indicators.

"I haven't made up my mind. I haven't figured it out," Reagan answered.

One day, a kind lady took young Ronald Reagan to a cobbler to have a pair of shoes custom-made for him. The cobbler asked, "Do you want shoes with round toes or square toes?" ( ① ) Young Reagan hemmed and hawed, and said, "I don't know, but I'll decide and let you know tomorrow." ( ② ) So the cobbler said, "Come back in a day or two and tell me what you want." ( ③ ) A few days later the cobbler saw young Reagan on the street and asked what he had decided about the shoes. ( ④ ) The cobbler replied, "Very well, your shoes will be ready tomorrow." ( ⑤ ) When Reagan got the shoes, one had a round toe and the other a square toe.

41. According to communication experts, even when your mouth is closed you are saying a lot. When people speak to you, they are receiving many messages about how interested you are. The intensity of your interest can be measured by the way your body talks. Eye contact is one of the surest indicators. If you are staring at the wall or glancing at other people, the speaker gets a strong impression of how little you care about the conversation. On the other hand, if you look people directly in the eyes as they speak, you will be amazed at how effective it is as a communication device. Eye contact is a powerful magnet for drawing people in. If you hold another person's gaze longer than, say, two seconds, it's a clear sign that you're giving him or her your full attention.

42. Are you relying on the G, PG, PG-13 and R ratings to determine which movies your kids can see? I would advise against that. I have seen many R rated movies that would be fantastic for older children to view since they portray the best in people, who are dealing with the violence of war. I have also witnessed PG movies where the central theme of the story is how much the children can disrespect the parents — a horrible message. As a parent, go beyond the rating and find out what's in the potential movie your children want to see and then determine whether it will be helpful or harmful to your kids based on their age and understanding. Movies can be incredibly powerful teaching tools if you and your kids go see a great movie together. But be informed on what your kids will be viewing on the big screen.

A Frenchman, Jacques Cousteau, had been searching for years to find a way he could go down into the sea and swim as freely as a fish. One day, he saw a seal break through the water near his home. She put her head up and took a huge gulp of air before diving again.

- (A) He designed the "third lung," which was an air-filled metal tank he strapped to his back. His air supply came through a hose connected from his mouth to the tank.
- (B) When he knew that a seal's lungs can expand to hold extra air, Cousteau thought, "If I, too, had a third lung, could I then stay under water for a long time, too?"

(C) He dived into the water and gasped in wonder as he descended into a world filled with beauty and magic. Thanks to the tank, known as the SCUBA, millions of trained divers have shared Cousteau's wonder-filled exploration of the sea.

Sameness can be monotonous: It can also be wonderful — especially when it is the same people participating in the same thing each year. However, this year we have more physically handicapped children to care for and operating costs just won't stay down. In addition, we are expanding our physical therapy program. We have some new equipment, but need more. We need another professional therapists as well as more volunteer assistants. All this takes more of that same commodity: money. The crippled children respond well to our help and their parents are appreciative of the benefits from your contribution. You gave generously last year, and we feel confident that you will want to give again this year. Perhaps you can give even more than last year. Please be as generous as possible, and use the enclosed envelope for your tax-deductible gift.

If you are going to take a photograph of a friend and his new car, boat or personal belonging, it's likely that he'd lean against his new possession, put his foot on it or place his arm around it. When he holds the property, it becomes an extension of his body and this is how he shows others that it belongs to him. Lovers hold hands or put their arms around each other in public to show competitors they have a claim over that person. The business executive puts his feet on his desk or leans against his office doorway to show his claim to that office and its furnishings. A woman dusts imaginary pieces of lint from the shoulder of her husband to tell other women he's taken.

(A) If you want to be a big-picture thinker, you will have to go against the flow. Society wants to keep people in boxes. Most people are married mentally to the status quo. They seek safety and simple answers. To think in the big-picture, you need to give yourself permission to go a different way, to break new ground, and to find new worlds to conquer. Never forget there is more out there in the world than what you've experienced. An old saying sums it up perfectly: "A small man is made up of small thoughts."

(B) I'm a fan of progress, and I am a big believer in (a) human potential. So I felt very excited on that Sunday when NASA was about to put a man on the moon for the first time in history. But an interesting thing happened that day. As I spoke to the people in my church about (b) this major accomplishment, I could tell that I wasn't connecting with them. The more they just sat there, the more energetic and animated I got. But no matter how hard I tried, they just would not respond.

(C) I grew up in a household where anything was possible, and we celebrated (c) the big picture. So it shocked me when I had my first major experience with minds unalterably closed. It happened one Sunday in August of 1969. Just a few weeks after getting married and graduating from college, I took (d) my first job as a pastor in a small town in rural Indiana. Calling it a town is being generous. The place consisted of fourteen houses, a gas station, and a country store.

(D) After the service, as I shook hands and chatted, I realized something shocking: they did not believe that a man was about to walk on the moon! One man told me, "If God had wanted a man on the moon, He would have put him there." It floored me. I realized then that many of the town's residents had (e) a very small view of the world. They had not altered their narrow thinking in years and they did not want to expand it. It was the first time I had encountered such small thinking. * status quo : 현상 유지

I always thought writing one book in one year was an amazing accomplishment, until I read an article on the science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke. Many years ago he was diagnosed with a rare disease and was told he had only one year to live. As a struggling writer with a young family to support, he realized that he would be leaving his family with nothing. If he pushed himself, he realized he might be able to write one more novel. He was used to taking one to two years to write a novel. Then he had a quantum moment — a quantum leap in thinking. He realized that his belief that he needed one or two years to write a novel was only a belief. It had no reality to it except that he had accepted it as a fact and acted accordingly. What would happen, he thought, if he changed this belief? Could he possibly write a book in one month, or even one week? What are the possibilities of achievement in this final year?

He knew that if he wanted to leave his family with some financial security, he needed to write more than one new book. Now _____ forced him to make a quantum leap in his thinking, and so he did. He wrote ten books that year, and several remarkable things happened. Firstly, he discovered, much to his amazement, that the quality of his work did not diminish. In fact, in many ways, it improved. Secondly, his illness, which had been called terminal, went into remission and at the end of the year he was fine. It seems the body liked this new quantum leap. He not only healed himself but also now had ten books on the market. Being healed, he then had the choice to go back to his old method of writing or embrace the new. Which one did he do? What would you do? Of course he embraced his new model.
