39. The World Health Organization estimates that in 2005, about 1.6 billion adults were overweight, of which at least 400 million were very fat. One of the secrets of staying thin is a good night's rest. Researchers in France discovered that after a bad night's sleep, people ate 550 calories more than normal. This represented about one large hamburger. In an experiment, feelings of hunger were higher among a test group who slept four hours the previous night than among those who slept eight hours. These results indicate that lack of sleep increases food intake and could be a factor promoting fatness.

People don't realize their moods are always on the run. They think instead that their lives have suddenly become worse in the past day, or even the last hour. So, someone who is in a good mood in the morning might love his wife, his job, and his car. He is probably optimistic about his future and feels grateful about his past. But by late afternoon, if his mood is bad, he claims he hates his job, thinks of his wife as a trouble, thinks his car is junk, and believes he's going nowhere in his career. If you ask him about his childhood while he's in a low mood, he'll probably tell you it was extremely difficult.

(A) "Ouch, something is biting my foot!" I cried, falling to the ground. My teacher, Ms. Bell, hurried over and (a) she quickly inspected my right foot. "Take off your shoe," instructed Ms. Bell, but then I remembered my socks. Despite my pain, I wouldn't let Ms. Bell take off my shoe. Unfortunately, holes in socks were common in my family and I was ashamed of them.

(B) I knew that Ms. Angela had saved my pride with the sock-eating ant story she made. She'd seen that I would rather be stung to death than let others see my poverty. (b) This insightful teacher had taught me a lesson of compassion that I have tried to apply in my thirty years of teaching.

(C) Ms. Angela looked into my red eyes. (c) "I have had bites from this type of ant before: sock-eaters. They ate half my sock!" she said. (d) She took off my shoe. "Just what I thought, those ants have eaten part of your sock," she said. Ms. Angela shook my shoe. Two red ants fell out. Ms. Angela smiled at me.

(D) Ms. Bell took me to the principal's office. "Something is stinging her, but she won't let me take off her shoe," Ms. Bell said to Mr. Stewart. He had almost managed to take off my shoe but then I saw the hole, so I grabbed my shoe and held tight. Just then, (e) Ms. Angela, a fifth-grade teacher entered the office.

A friend of mine had a wife who was habitually late. He had nagged and nagged his wife about her being late, but nothing changed. Finally, he realized he could not change her; he could only change his response to her. Tired of suffering the consequences of her behavior, he decided to give them back to her.

One night they had plans to go to a dinner party, and he did not want to be late. In advance, he told her that he wanted to be on time and that if she were not ready by 6:00 P.M., he would leave without her. She was late, and he left. When he came home that night, she screamed, "How could you leave without me!" He let her know that her _____ was what caused her to miss the dinner party. He also added that he was sad to have to go alone, but he did not want to miss the dinner. After a few more incidents like this, she knew that if she was late it would affect her and not him, and she changed.
