Oil and gas resources are not likely to be impacted by climate change because they result from a process that takes millions of years and are geologically trapped.

- (A) Thus, while climate change may not impact these resources, oil and gas reserves and known or contingent resources could be affected by new climate conditions, since climate change may affect access to these resources.
- (B) On the other hand, climate change may not only force the shutting down of oil- and gas-producing areas, but increase the feasibility of exploration in areas of the Arctic through the reduction in ice cover.
- (C) In Siberia, for instance, the actual exploration challenge is the time required to access, produce, and deliver oil under extreme environmental conditions, where temperatures in January range from -20°C to -3 5 °C. Warming may ease extreme environmental conditions, expanding the production frontier.
